

PetroChina planning temporary halt of US LNG buying

PetroChina Co may temporarily halt purchases of spot US liquefied natural gas spot cargoes through the winter to avoid potential tariffs amid a trade conflict between the US and China, according to sources with knowledge of the strategy. Under the plan, PetroChina would boost buying of spot cargoes from other countries or swap US shipments with other nations in East Asia to avoid paying additional tariffs, said the people, who asked not to be identified because the information isn't public. PetroChina, a unit of the state-owned China National Petroleum Corp, couldn't immediately comment when contacted by Bloomberg. China said last week that it was considering a 25% tariff on US LNG, which had been missing from previously targeted goods, in a direct hit to American gas exporters. The move comes ahead of the winter heating season when demand and prices typically peak and shows that Chinese President Xi Jinping may be willing to suffer some pain to avoid backing down from US President Donald Trump's trade dispute. PetroChina in February signed a 25-year deal to buy US LNG from Cheniere Energy Inc, with a portion of that supply expected to start this year. While China is currently the third- largest buyer of US LNG, American cargoes only made up about 5.7% of its imports over the last year, according to Sanford C Bernstein & Co. China's proposed tariff may temporarily benefit other suppliers, US Department of Energy Deputy Secretary Dan Brouillette said in an interview in Tokyo on Wednesday, noting that he doesn't expect any detrimental impact to the US energy industry.